Jennifer Moore is a seasoned trial attorney whose practice focuses on the defense of hospitals, physicians, and healthcare providers in complex medical malpractice litigation. She has extensive experience managing and trying high-damages cases, with a particular emphasis on obstetrical malpractice claims involving catastrophic birth injuries, delayed C-sections, and alleged mismanagement of fetal monitoring.

Jennifer is widely recognized for her deep understanding of the medical issues central to obstetrical cases, including fetal heart rate interpretation, labor and delivery management, and the nuances of perinatal decision-making. Her ability to work closely with medical experts and translate complex clinical issues into compelling legal narratives makes her a formidable advocate in the courtroom and a trusted advisor to her clients.

In addition to her litigation practice, Jennifer regularly advises healthcare providers on risk mitigation strategies and best practices in documentation, informed consent, and disclosure. She has represented clients before state licensing boards and administrative agencies and has earned recognition from Best Lawyers, Washington Super Lawyers® and as a Fellow of the Litigation Counsel of America.

Jennifer's clients value her tenacity, strategic thinking, and commitment to delivering strong results in high-stakes cases where the medicine is as challenging as the law.
